It should be borne in mind, that feed cost represents only about 54 per cent of lowing comparisons are brought out:

By groups beginning with the first the per cow was 2230, 2736, 3274, 3778, 5086 and 12,155 respectively. The total cost $60.04, and $83 19 respectively. It will be noted that as the production increased ly until the fourth group, where the sud-den drop was due to the inclusion of three cows fed only on pasture without grain or other supplementary feed.

The cost of feed per 100 pounds milk was $1.76, $1.63, $1.36, $1.07. $1.1 and $0.68 respectively. It is apparent, therefore, that as the production increased, even though the cost of feed per cow increased also, the cost of pro-ducing milk decreased. It is interesting to see the variation from the first group the last where, with an average pro luction of practically six times the first, we have the cost per 100 pounds of milk reduced to one-third of the cost where e production was only 2230. Possibly a better basis of compariso is the butterfat. The cost of butterfat

From 300 cows in the various berds I have taken for my comparison: Group 1, containing eight cows, producing less than 2500 pounds of milk; group 2, ten cows, 2500 to 3000 pounds; group 3, eleven cows, 3500 to 3500; group 4, seven cows, 3500 to 4000; group 5, three cows, 4000 to 5000; group 6, three cows, 9000 to 14,000. In these six groups the following comparisons are brought out:

Mature has blessed Maine orchardists. Nature has blessed Maine orchardists Care in growing, picking, storing and grading their fruit will do the rest. A well-organized, intelligently directed apples can best come about through the narketing organizations. Even though the producer furnishes igh-grade product and the public is well informed of its merits, if the com nodity is not available in such quanti ies and at such seasons as the people want it, the dealer will seek regular ources of supply to keep his customers ven though this may mean the disposa of stock of inferior quality. No individ-ual or small group of individuals can supply the trade with apples throughout e season. The Maine Fruit Growers' Exchange through its local branches and membership could easily have an orderly marketing program by having every grower report his prospective yield of ach variety. Keeping the customer pleased means careful attention to details. It necessitates getting the consumer's angle as well as the producer's. It signifies grading production per pound reckoned in cents up to the requirements of the Maine ap-

This statement will paint verbal picture of the exact "quality and ondition" of the apples at time of shipment, and is prima facie evidence in all courts of Maine. Or, if a shipper is in shipping point inspection can be called for before the apples are loaded and the grade determined. It is far better to

The Business of Homemaking.

(Miss Frances B. Freeman, Professor of Home Sconomics, U. of M.) pecies, to conserve social possessions to make for social progress. "The nation whose family life decays rots at the core, for its chief spring of social and olvio virtue dries up."

With a sense of this relation to the welfare of society, the business of home-making assumes a share in the world's t has been associated. The extent of he business of homemaking may be realized when it is known that approximately 26,000,000 women or three-fourths of all the women are engaged in this

Homemaking is a composite-occupa-tion made up of a number of skilled but indifferentiated occupations. The homemaker as joint manager is responsible or the character of the enterprise, for the standard of living a This standard of living is that spiritual atmosphere, compounded of income and what we buy with it, ideals and tastes and the environment provided by our fellows. She is the purchasing agent, the business man-ager, the superintendent of the plant, the health and welfare manager. As social manager she has a difficult task to perform. The economic waste on amusements appears not only in excessive proportion of the income claimed by them, but also in waste of time and strength badly needed for important things. A definite amusement program for the family would correlate the necessity for recreation, the conservation of time and health and a proper budget allotment. A simple recreation schedule, alive and interesting, may be productive of invaluable family habits thing we call social standing .-The goal of home training, expressed in its simplest terms, is the moulding of character. The child is its great social output. Finally the woman partner is almost wholly responsible for creating the home atmosphere, a subtle, pervading influence, giving confidence and sympathy for living and work, reacting on family ambition and loyalty and is the outward expression of family happiness. The thing to be counted essential la he home is the thing that the boy or girl carries away. Only by a careful evaluation of essentials and non-essenials can the homemaker maintain her reatest power. It was a New England nother who said that she would rather have a little dust on the table than to have it in her brain. The homemaker

which so largely determine that complex hould aim to maintain her perspective and keep herself young in body and in apirit. She should at all times be a part f the world and its life if she would command the respect of the members of er family for her wisdom and guidance. The importance of participation in the activities of church, club and community organization is obvious. She needs these contacts in order to keep herself most group, and as a means of maintaining a

The Candy Habit. Every normal child has a natural crav-

Nowadays, there are enticing candy dren are exposed to constant temptation o spend pennies for candy.
At an up-to-date school, where a wholeome lunch is served to children at cost rice, I was shocked to see candy on sale The domestic science principal, however xplained that the pupils are so habitusted to buying candy, that they would cun down the street to the nearest candy tore at noontime, recess, and between lasses, so the teachers decided it was etter for them to have the opportunity buy and eat pure chocolate and clear uit sugar candies with their luncheon t noon time. The experiences of these eachers show how prevalent, and firmly stablished is the habit of eating candy. Dentists tell us that candy may cause and aggravate decay of the teeth. Doc tors declare that candy causes digestive coubles and other ills. These warnings hould influence sensible folk to indulge in sweetmeats to a moderate degree when in good health, and to abstain, bsolutely, when in ill health. Delicate children should be nourished by carefully selected food, and the diet should be prescribed by physicians.

The proper time to eat candy is at the nd of a meal, when hunger is already atisfied. It is now good form to serve eppermints or wintergreen mints with This is a sensible and healthful custom, and might well be followed in ordinary family meals, as a means of gratifying, and yet regulating, children's craving for sweetmeats.

Elizabeth C., carefully guarded and rained, knows nothing about spending noney for sweets. Every day, at her uncheon, she is given two or three bits of pure candy. This may be a chocolate square, or a peppermint stick, or hard fruit drops. The little girl would not hink of entering a candy shop to buy candy, any more than she would go to a grocery store to purchase food for herself. She is accustomed to having her needs supplied in a moderate, satisfying

Mabel D. used to beg dimes and nickels from first one and then another of he devoted relatives When a physician was called in account of digestive trouble, he laid out a plain, sensible diet, and it was then discovered that Mabel had been buying candy, ice cream cones, or soda wate almost every day.

The father 'took the matter in hand When he explained carefully to the child that liver trouble, toothache, stomac pains, headache, neuralgia, etc., might be brought on by indulgence in sweets between meals, she readily promised to abstain from buying them. She was encouraged to put all cash given her in a pretty little bank.

As a reward for her self-denial, when she was in good health, her father brought home every Saturday night a pound box of good candy, to be served at the family dinner on Sunday. Mabel always passed this around as her contri-

Every Saturday during the winter, the children make pulled thinks I'm great fun—told me so outmolasses candy, or fudge, or pop corn balls, etc. They have been trained to clean up the kitchen, afterwards, and leave everything neat and orderly. Usually they eat only a few samples of the fresh candy, and reserve a portion for evening dinner, to be shared with "Daddy and Mother." Sometimes—they ask a few of their schoolmates to spend the afternoon and help make the candy and have a jolly time.

As Plain as an

Old Shoe

"With the very shortest night t make up for it," sensible Jane retorted. Clare pouted: "I know that, work which should relieve it of much of Miss Smarty—but you know I am not talking about real time; I'm just so tired waiting for tomorrow, and the train, and the Springs afterward. How can you sit there stock still? You've never been anywhere, either." "Sure enough I haven't-but fidgeting won't get me there a minute earlier-and it may get me there crossand tired and red-eyed from lack of sleep--." Jane began Oh, do hush, old Commonsense Clare flung back, pouting. "You have no business to be always so right.

almost hate you." "Hate me all you like-if it does you any good,"- Jane returned tranquilly. "Asleep it can't hurt me-and I'm going sound asleep in just about

Clare wanted to pinch her equable cousin. Herself a bit of human quicksilver, she really resented Jane's ever temper and lack of nerves. It was well she lacked nerves-otherwise Grand ma Bingham's open favoritism would have made her unhappy. Clare could do no wrong in Grandma's partial eyes Jane, indeed, often got scoldings, the backwash of irritation over Clare's small transgression-which could no be visited upon its rightful object. Orphans, a bare week apart in age they had come to womanhood neither friends nor enemies. Clare was far and away the better looking, Jane the more intelligent, capable and obedient -also something richer. There was the rub—the home would be hers when grandma no longer needed it, also fine silver, china, rugs and so on, that had been her mother's when she was brought there a bride. Natur ally grandma pinched herself, and would have pinched the household for Clare's benefit had not Jane's guardian put his foot down on such scanting. A curmudgeonly old bachelor lawyer, grandma rated him, because forsooth he did not melt at the blandishments of her pet. Yet he had not been il Jane gave free service to Clare. When grandma brought the girls to town, for Christmas and Easter shopping Mr. Joyce behaved handsomely to everybody, buying theater tickets, paying for dinners and other incidentals More, this journey was at his instance, and more than half at Jane's cost. As well pay for grandma as any other chaperon, said Joyce, adding that Clara need not spend extravagantly-she would not require an extra room, and there would be space enough for her in his big limousine. grandma bought her two new evening gowns handsomer than anything Jane

"I ought to come home engaged t millionaire," she said over her shoulder, looking at herself in the big blurred pierglass: "If I do-be sure you will never see me here after the wedding. I hate this frowsy, mussy place, stuck full of samplers, and portraits like signboards. Granny is the only thing I'd take away with me if Jane laughed provokingly. Springwater somehow does not understand quicksilver. Some ways she was generous as sunshine, in others too just to be over merciful. Free of envy or jealousy, she could not in the least inderstand Clare, who ran on resentfully: "You don't care for things as I do because you know you can have them if you choose—as I can't." . "Never mind, Clarissy," Jane said smiling. "You don't have to give houseroom to any of the horrors here. I'll give you a brand-new weddnig present What shall it be-a diamond ring or pearl earring?"

"If only you'd give them both nov without waiting," Clare breathed fervently. "They'd help so. You know noney loves money.

"I thought marriage was a matter of men loving women and getting love back again," Jane said almost sharply. "But if you mean what you say you shall have your gew-gaws."

The morrow came at last. A little later the limousine went. In result Beechwood Springs had a mild sensation, made manifest in the flesh of the Leslie cousins. One was, it was whispered, quite quite rich; one mighty easy to look at, said youth masculine. Also to dance and flirt with, but never beyond decorum—there was always a black satin dragon with high lights on gold spectacles and point lace looming in the background. Somehow insidiously rumor crept about that the beauy was likewise the heiress. Then Jane, who had been a hopeful prospect found herself rather out of things, except with plain elderly folks who liked her clear, precise speech, her pretty deference to age She danced, of course, moderately walked a bit, took motor rides, but always in the family vehicle, whose handsome solidity was equal to a commercial rating. She was kindly regardful of grandmam, though everyone saw how the land lay there. Indeed there was not a dissenting voice when old Major Anstey said fervently, watching her: "A real girl, nice as they make ust what fashion nobody knew. Light broke when a youngster with all the earmarks of great riches fell upon the or gum drops, is passed around.

Also, it is worth remembering when one is obliged to tell a child, "You have out at last! Tell me what deviltry out at last! Tell me what deviltry his back and cried: "Old fox! Smoked you're brewing here in the wilds." "None at all," said the major with winkling eyes. "Fact is, Ned, my boy, I'm up to my eyes in a plan to-join the Salvation Army."

After which the pair locked hands and laughed loud and long. Inside a week Beechwood Springs revolved about E. Forsythe Anstey. He had brought two cars, a valet-

ider may be man of mystery than of millions other partners for bridge and other "You must wait until Satur guests for seats in the limousine Clare might have tried to make up for her cousin's defection if she had not right. If only I had some new clothes -everybody here knows all I have"pausing with half defiant appeal in her

> Jane nodded softly. "One frock a least," she promised. Clare looked down, saying shamed ly: "I hate begging. Be sure, though I'll pay you when-I can." There is no debty Jane answered.

But, Clare, please stop throwing ourself so openly at his head. Remem er the name is mine same as yours. "That's the way you spoil everything," Clare shot back through angry tears, running away. But she clutched Jane's check eagerly an hour later, and drove away smiling in a fool's paradise to select that which she felt sure would clinch her victory."

As she went out of sight Major Anstey said bowing over grandma's hand: "Madam, may I speak to you Fluttered, yet beaming, grandma went outside. She beamed still more when she understood that the private natter was the asking of her granddaughter's hand in marriage for his nephew. Edward Forsythe. A good boy in spite of the froth on top, said the major—a wife of the right sort would be not merely his making, but his salvation. Hadn't courage to speak for himself unless the ice was broken afraid of a girl until he saw Miss There grandma fainted opportunely Jane came rushing to help her, so the major had a chance to explain. What she said in answer is immaterial in view of the fact that she has been for several years past Mrs. Edward Forsythe Anstey, yet is still as plain as a bit; said he had never been the least

ing Their Pottery. One of the most ancient arts and in dustries of America, the manufacture of clay utensils by American Indians has received the aid of ceramic experts of bureau of standards of the Depart-

Both in Arizona and New Mexico the Indian still makes his clay pots and other wares as he did years ago, but they find different use. Travelers and sightseers purchase them as souvenirs. They have to stand rougher usage in being transported to civilization's front parlors than they did when they hung over camp fires.

When burned in the primitive way by burying in a smoldering heap of refuse, Indian ceramic ware is fragile Through the Indian office of the Department of the Interior the Indians appealed to the bureau of standards to help them produce better ware. Ceramic engineers of the bureau of standards made burning tests of some of the clay used in the Indian ware and recommended that it be burned at a slightly higher temperature. The pottery is decorated by using a manganese ore and methods were worked out by the bureau so that the higher burning temperature will not destroy the decoration. The Indians were also told how to use cobalt stains for their work, and they were given plans for simple but modern kilns for burn-

"Blood Money."

"Blood Money" was the name applied in the Middle ages and well into he more modern period to the money paid for bloodshed. It might be either he compensation paid by a manslayer to the nearest relatives of the victim, o secure himself and his kin from vengeance, or the money paid as a reward for bringing about the death of another, directly or through evidence. It was once common among the Scandinavian and Teutonic peoples, who called this money payment wergild. The price varied with the nature of the crime and the rank of the victim. Certain crimes, such as not be compensated by a money payment; such criminals were declared utlaws and could be slain with impunity. The term is now often applied o the reward or bribe paid for giving ip a criminal to justice.
